The Odour of Chrysanthemums

In "The Lives of the Jain Elders" by the 12th century Jaina author Hemacandra, the story was told Canto 9:of how "one of Kunala's mother's fellow wives" noticed a letter, "written in the local dialect, so that it would be widely understood", en route from the king to the prince, saying "let the prince begin his studies" " kumaro adhiyau ". Bailey, who have occupied themselves with the analysis of the form of value, have been unable to arrive at any result, first, because they confuse the form of value with value itself; and second, because, under the coarse influence of the practical bourgeois, they exclusively give their attention to the quantitative aspect of the question.
